

Web Design Tampa

Tips for Selecting a Quality Web Design Company

We have found in working with web design clients that our most mutually beneficial business relationships have grown from customers we work with in the Tampa Bay Region. And this is the majority of our website development and marketing client base. Site design and internet marketing is an extremely technically complex field of endeavor and something is "lost" when we cannot occasionally sit down, face to face, with our customers. Unfortunately, many of our web design and optimization customers have had prior to hiring us, at least several unsuccessful (and expensive) experiences in hiring a company that did not deliver, or did not deliver a credible website internet presence. So based upon our breadth of experience, we have formulated a list of recommendations, in addition to working with a local Tampa area company, for you to consider when selecting a web design firm.

1. How long the web site development firm been in business. Certainly, this speaks for itself. Successful companies thrive and grow over time. Is the firm incorporated? If located in Florida, you can check www.sunbiz.org and view this type of information, as well as a list of the corporate officers.
2. Reference List of Clients. Obtain some phone numbers or email addresses of long term web design clients and make certain you contact at least a handful to gain their opinion of the quality of services provided.
3. Look at sample web designs that have been developed. Assure that they function technically as they should. They should provide a positive marketing impact on the potential website visitor and present the company in a way that differentiates from competitors.
4. Find out who in the company will be working on your website or e-commerce project and what their background and qualifications are.
5. Look at your long term internet marketing goals and make sure the firm you select can deliver on these. If search engine optimization (high rankings and traffic) are an important long term goal, select a web design company that can deliver on this need, as well as the functional site that you may be looking for today. If you plan to add content management (the ability to perform updates to the web design itself) somewhere down the road, assure the company you select can provide for this need.

Joanne C. Roach , President, JCR Enterprise, Inc.
727-510-9704
www.website-design-tampa.com

Our philosophy is to work with internet marketing clients and provide solutions to enhance business success in today's internet environment, as well as future needs. JCR Enterprise, Inc. provides high quality, customized web designs to customers within the Tampa region and throughout the United States.